ENERGY REFORM

Since 1938 PEMEX was the state monopoly in the local oil and gas sector

“On December 20, 2013, Mexico’s President Enrique Peña Nieto formally signed one of the most significant economic reform laws of the last several decades. The Mexican government amended its Constitution, effectively opening the oil and gas energy) to private foreign and local investors after 75 years.”

The National Hydrocarbons Commission (CNH)

The National Hydrocarbons Commission (CNH) was established on November 28, 2008 as an organization with technical autonomy to regulate and supervise the exploration and production of hydrocarbons in Mexico. The CNH was formally instated on May 20, 2009, following the appointment of 5 commissioners who comprise its Governing body.

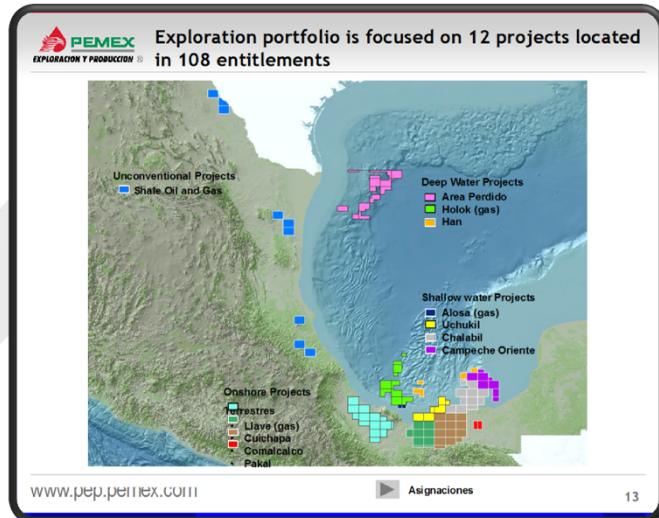

On December 20, 2013 a decree amending and supplementing various Energy-related provisions of the Constitution of the United Mexican States was published in the Official Federation Gazette. Articles 25, 27 and 28 of the Constitution were amended, thus creating a robust legal framework that strengthens the industry and that will increase oil revenues for the benefit of all Mexicans. Furthermore, the institutional organization of the regulatory bodies in the sector was adapted, in accordance with the new energy model.

Among the secondary laws published are the Hydrocarbons Law and the Law of Coordinated Regulatory agencies in the field of Energy. The laws empower the CNH as the governing body in the exploration and production of hydrocarbons in Mexico, giving it a separate legal personality, technical and administrative autonomy, and fiscal self-sufficiency.
